

URGES GOVERNMENT CONTROL ISSUANCE OF RAILROAD STOCK

Railway Commission Goes On Record in Favor of Legislation.

A resolution in favor of Federal and State control and regulation of the issuance of railroad stocks and securities was unanimously adopted by the National Association of Railway Commissioners at today's session of the convention. The association today also voted to hold its 1914 meeting in this city beginning October 28.

After the resolution with regard to railroad securities had been offered by the chairman of the committee on that subject, C. H. Hughes, State railway commissioner of Ohio; Interstate Commerce Commissioner Juan C. Clements made an address favoring its passage. The resolution reads as follows:

"Resolved, that it is the sense of this convention that there should be secured by appropriate legislation full publicity on the issuance of railroad stocks and securities, and in addition a reasonable measure of restraint and control by public authority."

"Publicity alone is not enough," said Commissioner Clements. "What effect has publicity on those corporations which defy public opinion as well as good morals?"

Commissioner Clements said regulation of stock issues was necessary both to protect the public, which pays the freight rates and the honest investor in the securities of a railroad who is entitled to protection, particularly widows and orphans. The State ought to see that their investments are not drowned in a flood of water, said the commissioner.

The committee on car service was directed to prepare a report on ways and means of preventing car shortages. Officers for next year were elected at yesterday afternoon's session as follows:

President, C. H. Hughes, Ohio; President, L. B. Fann, Penn.; Vice President, Clifford Thorne, Iowa; Secretary, W. H. Connolly, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, secretary.

Reclamation Head Reaches Capital

F. H. Newell, director of the Reclamation Service, has returned to Washington after a two-month inspection trip on the irrigation projects in the northern half of the arid region.

The development of the reclaimed areas is being seriously retarded in many sections by the inflation of land values. Until a readjustment of these prices to the real value of the land has been made there will be a lessening of interest in Western farms.

Crops on all Government projects visited were above the average, and in the main the condition of the settlers shows an improvement over that of last year.

SOUTHERN HEROINE IS GRATIFIED BY ARLINGTON SHAFT

Mrs. Ella Newsome Trader Happy Over Monument To Confederates.

Totally blind in one eye and almost entirely deaf, Mrs. Ella Newsome Trader, known as the "Florence Nightingale of the South," is happy today that the memory of the brave Confederate dead in Arlington Cemetery has been marked with a fitting memorial.

The life of Mrs. Trader, who for many years has been an employee of the Pension Office, reads like fiction. She cherishes the consolation that her life has been one of humble sacrifice and recalls with happiness her work among the wounded soldiers of the Confederacy during the war between the States. She too has hundreds of friends among the Union veterans today, some of whom possibly owe their lives to her nursing when they were in the hands of Confederate troops after receiving painful wounds on the battlefield.

During the war between the North and the South, Mrs. Trader, then Mrs. Ella Newsome, practically her entire fortune, amounting, it is said, to between $5,000 and $7,000, though Mrs. Trader herself cannot say what the amount was. "I kept no account of the money I gave in founding hospitals and nursing the wounded and sick soldiers. My heart was in my work, and not about my money," said Mrs. Trader.

Not only did she give her fortune to help alleviate the sufferings of wounded soldiers, but the labor of five of her servants. And, too, besides money, she supplied food from her great plantation.

Imprisoned by her generosity, Mrs. Trader, after the war, was practically penniless. She came to Washington and obtained a position in the Pension Office, where she has served faithfully ever since.

Today she is not sorry for her experience as a nurse during the war, or that she gave her fortune to "The Lost Cause." She will die happy that she once served Dixie and served it well.

A striking tribute is said Mrs. Trader by a Union soldier, who has written a history of her life. It will be published as soon as she can save enough money to have it done. This soldier, wounded on a Southern battlefield, was taken by the Confederates. He was nursed back to life by the "Florence Nightingale." Feeling that her name had not properly been placed on the pages of history, the soldier was anxious that the public know of her life of sacrifice, so gathering all the information possible about her he has written the real story of Dixie's "Florence Nightingale."

Mrs. Trader, with her daughter, Miss Ella Trader, now lives at 1211 N street northwest.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 21.—Though Herbert H. Hockin, secretary-treasurer of the Ironworkers, and accused "captain of the dynamite squad," insists he will take the stand in his own behalf in the dynamite conspiracy trial, it was said today that the defense was inclined not to permit him to go on.

Cautioned not to talk, the defendants declined to discuss Hockin further, but it was suspected that serious disagreements have developed lately among the forty-five defendants.

Hockin, as usual, distributed the mail and messages among the defendants in the court room today.

Shanks formerly was an enlisted man at Fort Myer, where his good record obtained for him the position of engineer at the pumping station at Rosslyn, which supplies the reservation with water. The authorities say that their investigation developed that for several months little girls ranging in age from eleven to fifteen had been almost daily visitors at the pumping station.
